

ROUND 2 INTERVIEW
November 6, 2020

ADAM SCOTT (-3)

Q. Another solid day, Adam. Just some key takeaways on your play this week.

ADAM SCOTT: It's been kind of slow and steady. Everything's been okay. I've done everything satisfactory so far. If I could just hit a few more irons in there close and give myself a couple more good chances over the weekend each day, I think I can put myself in the mix.

Q. Can you just describe the back nine here at the golf course and particularly the 9th hole?

ADAM SCOTT: Yeah. I mean, just generally the course is relentless. It's just demanding off the tee. It requires something long and straight, and then you must hit the green in the right spot, too, especially the 9th hole. Dustin's ball was on the green for a good 10 seconds today and ended up in the water, so you have to be very precise on some of them. The challenge is all around the greens, the course is still kind of growing in and that's making it very difficult from down in the low areas around the greens. You know, you just have to get a little bit creative this week and somehow get it up on the green and try and save your par.

Q. And lastly, does playing this week, is there anything preparation-wise going into next week's major?

ADAM SCOTT: Yeah, I think this course, because it is quite relentless as far as it's long and it's a bit of a brute, is testing the patience and the focus and that's always tested at a major championship. There's nothing much resembling Augusta National here, they're very different kinds of golf courses, but that long day out on the course where you're required to hit a lot of tough shots is similar and that's testing the mental side of it very much.
